

Sirs:

It is important that you uphold the New Jersey Do Not Call Law. The States should have the final say on how to handle nuisance telemarketing calls for its inhabitants. I signed up the Do Not Call registry and found a significant drop in the number of telemarketing calls, including from businesses that I have previous relationships with. I do not wish to have an increase in telemarketing calls that take away from my use of my phone that I pay for. For the FCC to reduce the effectiveness of New Jersey's Do Not Call Registry and Rules and substitute the FCC's version of the Law without the restriction of telemarketers whom an individual has previously dealt is intolerable. If the telemarketers want a less restrictive law, let them pay for individuals' phone bills. Once the requirement of requiring telemarketers to reimburse people for tying up their phone lines is in place, they'll think twice about bothering people at home who value their time with peace and quiet. Kindly let the States either adopt the Federal Do Not Call Law or use their own, if it is more stringent. Thank you.
